SOUTH ASIA CENTER REPORT 2011

CONTACTS | EVENTS | MEDIA

ABOUT THE SOUTH ASIA CENTER

The Atlantic Council's South Asia Center was launched in 2009, under the leadership of Shuja Nawaz. The Center serves as the Atlantic Council's focal point for work on greater South Asia¹ as well as its relations between these countries, the neighboring regions, Europe and the United States. It seeks to foster partnerships with key institutions in the region to establish itself as a forum for dialogue between decision-makers in South Asia, the United States, and NATO, and continues to "wage peace" in the region. These deliberations cover internal and external security, governance, trade, economic development, education, and other issues. The Center remains committed to working with stakeholders from the region itself, in addition to partners and experts in the United States and Europe to offer comprehensive analyses and practicable recommendations for policymakers.

KEY ACHIEVEMENTS IN 2011

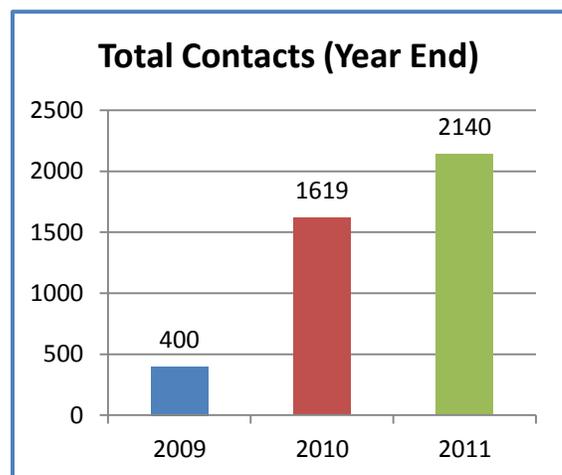

The South Asia Center is now the only think-tank based program in Washington DC focused on the region as a whole. The Center's commitment to substance and balanced viewpoints has increased its reputation as a source of up-to-date analysis on events pertaining to the region, and as a result, has strengthened its impact and influence in the US and abroad. Major highlights of 2011 include:

- Increase in quality and quantity of South Asia Center constituents and events
- Continuation and strengthening of existing projects and initiatives
- Development of new programs
- Greater diversification of funding, including multi-year support from Foundations

Snapshots

CONTACTS

The Center, launched in 2009, has achieved rapid growth in its constituency base – supporters, experts, and other stakeholders who are engaged in South Asia. At the end of 2009, the South Asia Center database had approximately 400 contacts, which quadrupled by the end of 2010, to over 1600 contacts. At the end of 2011, the Center had over 2100 contacts, a 43% percent increase over the previous year. In addition to adding to the quantity of contacts, the South Asia Center team has strategically focused on and succeeded in increasing the number of experts across sectors and issue areas, as well as those located within the South Asian region itself. This has allowed the Center to increase its reach and influence, as well as solicit greater input from its audience of experts.

¹ The South Asia Center's scope includes the following countries: Afghanistan, Pakistan, India, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Nepal, Sikkim, Maldives and Bhutan. The Center also covers issues related to Iran and parts of Central Asia.

SECTOR DIVERSITY

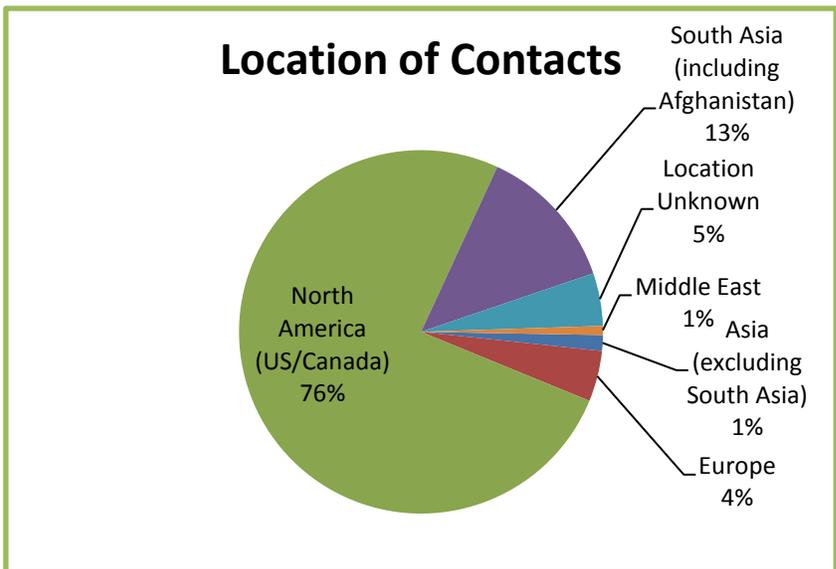

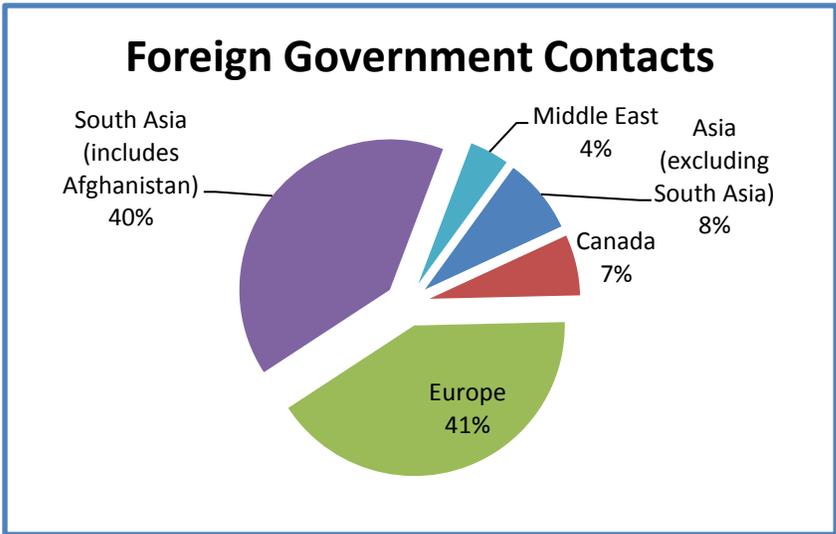

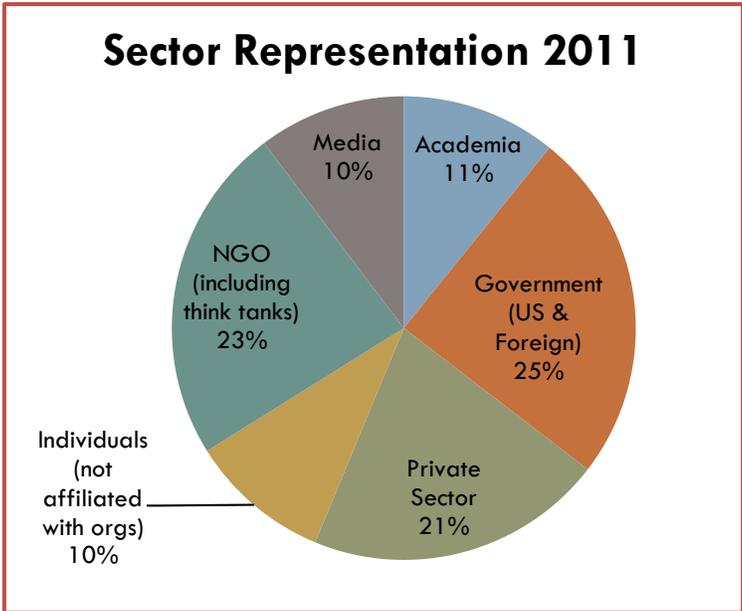

With growth of its constituency, the Center has also broadened its reach across sectors, most notably within the public sector, which includes US and foreign government representatives such as US Congressional staff members, White House officials, and foreign ambassadors. The Center now has greater interaction with foreign governments, which represent almost 50% of the Center’s government contacts. This includes foreign government representatives located in the United States. The Center has also increased outreach efforts to US Members of Congress through targeted invites to events, distribution of publications, the monthly newsletter, and in-person briefings. In 2011, Center Director, Shuja Nawaz, also testified to the House Committee on Homeland Security and to the House Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, and met with House Democratic leaders on issues regarding US-Pakistan relations.

The Center also showed an increase in the number/proportion of representatives from educational institutions in the United States and abroad, demonstrating an interest in the quality of our work by both practitioners and academics.

REGIONAL INPUT

The South Asia Center remains committed to soliciting input from outside the United States, particularly from European and South Asian partners, to ensure that analyses and recommendations reflect on-the-ground realities. Nearly 20% of the Center’s contacts are located abroad.

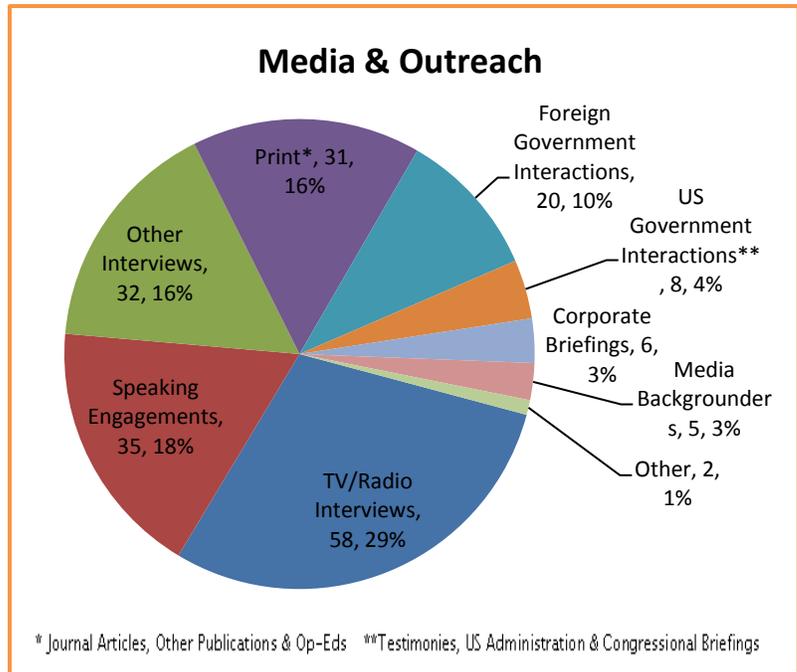

MEDIA & OUTREACH

In 2011, the South Asia Center strengthened its role as the as “the go to” source in Washington DC for input and analyses on South Asia. This included speaking engagements, mentions in print media, TV/radio interviews, foreign and US government briefings, and outreach to the private sector.

EVENTS

The South Asia Center provides a forum for public and private gatherings of policymakers, regional experts, thought leaders, and others to discuss critical issues on South Asia. In 2011, the Center remained active, with over 40 events, which included off-the-record discussions, large public events, and roundtables with key experts. The Center hosted an average of three events per month, with an average of 43 attendees at each event, and hosted global leaders, senior government officials, and former heads of state. The Center also hosted experts from across sectors, including military and business leaders, scholars, economists, and political activists. Events covered a range of important and relevant topics such as US-Pakistan relations, India’s increased demand for energy, and Iran’s nuclear capabilities. (For a detailed list of 2011 events, see Appendix.)

NEW AND CONTINUING PROJECTS

The South Asia Center continued to build on its record of substance and practicability by launching new initiatives and strengthening existing programs.

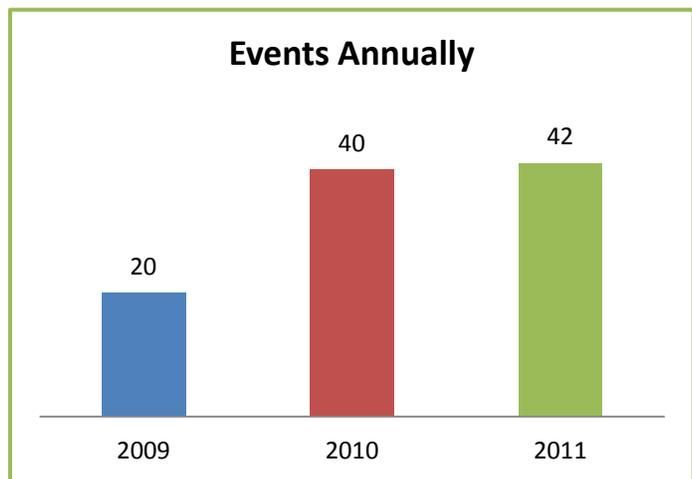

CURRENT KEY PROJECTS:

- Iran Task Force
- India-Pakistan Military Track 2 Dialogue
- India-Pakistan Water Conflict
- Engaging Young Pakistani Leaders of Tomorrow

The Center is also continuing its briefings and seminars for key officials and government agencies that are seeking to strengthen their understanding of the dynamics within South Asia.

FUNDING DIVERSITY

The Center has greatly increased its funding from foundations, strengthened relationships with government agencies (US and foreign), and continues to cultivate individual and corporate donors.

Moving Forward

As the Center moves into its third year, it will be important to scale up efforts, build capacity, identify new opportunities, and strengthen existing relationships. It will seek to deepen and diversify its funding base. While expanding its project portfolio and maintaining quality and relevance of its programming will certainly present challenges to the South Asia Center, the program is well-positioned to meet these challenges and achieve ambitious goals for 2012, through staff expansion and Fellow recruitment.

Afghanistan Ambassador Eklil Hakimi after his talk at the Council, August 2011

Key goals for 2012 include:

- Achieving 50-75% growth in the number of South Asia Center constituents.
- Maintaining strong government, media, and corporate outreach, but placing priority on building connections with media.
- Strengthening representation of regional stakeholders. 13% of the South Asia Center's contacts are located within South Asia. While Washington/North America remain a major area for outreach, the Center seeks to achieve a medium-term goal of 25% of total contacts located in South Asia. For 2012, the goal is to increase this proportion to 18%. The Center will also try to increase its representation of Europe-based stakeholders to 10%, with guiding input from the Atlantic Council's strong Europe-based constituency.
- Increasing quality of events. In 2012, the Center will maintain the current number of events, while strengthening quality and relevance. This will be achieved through better strategic planning of the events calendar, strengthened diversity of events and speakers, and improved attendance.
- Expanding programming. The South Asia Center will seek to build upon past and current projects through events, conferences, and publications, with an additional focus on events located within the region and in the US, outside of Washington. For example, in the first quarter of 2012, the South Asia Center will be hosting meetings on its Water Conflict project in India and Pakistan, events regarding Iran in SF/Bay Area, and work on India-Pakistan Track II initiatives in Southeast Asia. The Center will also add a number of initiatives to its current roster of programs, including a project addressing challenges and opportunities for young Pakistani civil society leaders and another project addressing India-Pakistan economic relations.
- Building influence with government. The Center is one of the most active programs at the Council in media outreach. In 2012, it will be important to maintain this activity, while placing greater priority on US Government interactions, with a goal of 10% for 2012, and also strengthening its outreach to foreign governments, particularly those representing South Asian and European countries.

Waging Peace

South Asia has and will continue to play a central role in global stability and economic growth. The South Asia Center is excited about following and contributing to this narrative and "waging peace" in the region. We welcome your support and feedback.
