

Jackson Mvunganyi is an award-winning Multimedia reporter and broadcaster. He is the host of Voice of America's Up Front radio program [since 2007] and The Red Carpet Television show . Each week, Up Front reaches over 35 Millions listeners around the African continent and beyond; on radio, television, and digital platforms. Jackson interacts with Africans, mostly youth on issues ranging from education, Climate Change, Entrepreneurship, culture, leadership, innovation etc.

The UpFront show Facebook page has almost a million followers and is one the most popular platforms focusing on topical African news and issues.

A native of Rwanda, Mvunganyi has a Bachelor of Science degree in Multimedia Design and Development from the American University in Washington D.C., and a master's degree in information management from the University of Maryland College Park.

In 2016, Jackson was named one of the 20 young African influencers in the diaspora. In 2020, the Washington DC based Pan African magazine Ayoo Africa named him a top 10 trailblazer in media.

He has been invited to speak and moderate at various high-level panels at the White House, UN, World Bank and Universities like MIT, Harvard, Wharton, Georgetown, Columbia and others.

You can follow him on twitter and Instagram @upfrontafrica.