

AbdoulKarim KOTONDI

Abdoulkarim Kotondi serves as Advisor to the Africa Group II Executive Director at the World Bank Group, where he supports strategic policy dialogue and decision-making on development finance, country programs, and institutional priorities. Based in Washington, DC, he works on issues related to sustainable development, private sector development, economic transformation, and international cooperation, helping advance solutions that promote growth, resilience, and poverty reduction in developing economies.

With nearly three decades of experience spanning international development, private sector development, banking, telecommunications, strategic communications, and organizational transformation, he has worked across the public, private, and multilateral sectors in Africa and internationally.

Before joining the World Bank Group, he served as Senior Expert for External Relations and Partnerships at Côte d'Ivoire's National Agency for Universal Telecommunications and ICT Services (ANSUT), and previously held senior positions with Drive Dentsu, Ecobank, and Atlantique Telecom-Moov. His career also includes consulting assignments in the private sector, and economic development initiatives supported by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

Mr. Kotondi holds a Master of Science in Organizational Management from the Université du Québec (UQAC) and has pursued further studies in development economics, marketing, and communications in Canada.
