

Melchior Nsavyimana

Founder

Together for a New Africa

With over twelve years of experience in humanitarian, academic, and development organizations at both national and international levels, Melchior has consistently focused on research, partnerships, and resource mobilization. Recognized for his dedication and commitment, he has worked with international NGOs, lectured at the Catholic University of Eastern Africa in Kenya, and served as international staff with the United Nations for more than six years across multiple countries, while continuing his research on African integration. Holding a PhD in International Relations from Sophia University in Italy, he specializes in regional integration processes and has built solid expertise in partnership management, program coordination, and diplomacy. He is the founder of Together for a New Africa, a regional initiative headquartered in Nairobi and spanning 14 countries, where he served as Secretary General for ten years. Under his leadership, the initiative grew from its initial design to full recognition as a regional association, successfully establishing partnerships with foundations and NGOs. His vision and leadership have been instrumental in advancing collaborative approaches to regional integration and strengthening institutional frameworks for sustainable development across Africa.
