Mechthild Wörsdörfer is Deputy Director-General at the European Commission's Directorate-General for Energy since October 2021.

She has a vast experience in energy and climate policies, being responsible for steering the work on energy markets and infrastructure, renewables as well as energy efficiency, consumer policy and innovation. She is also in charge of relations with the Energy Community as well as Ukraine, Moldova, Switzerland and the United Kingdom.

Previously, Ms Wörsdörfer headed the International Energy Agency's Directorate for Sustainability, where she notably led the work on the Agency's World Energy Outlook and Technology reports.

In her prior experiences at the Commission, she was head of unit in DG GROW on SME policies, and Member of the Cabinet of Commissioner Erkki Liikanen (Enterprise Policy and Information Society).

Ms Wörsdörfer academic background is in Economics and European Affairs (Heidelberg, Montpellier, and Brussels).